WVSD Rejoins Jr. NAD Program, Combined with Student Council
By Scott Hottle

West Virginia School for the Deaf (WVSD) recently rejoined the Junior National Association of the Deaf (NAD), combined with Student Council for the school year 2015-2016 with two new advisors, Scott Hottle and Krystal Shelton of WVSD Jr. NAD chapter. It is really exciting for every student to restart this high-level organization program to make our school life better.

We contacted and invited WVAD to come and meet with our secondary students on the weekend of November 6-8, 2015, for the WVSD Jr. NAD Leadership Retreat. We had the student debates for those who were interested in running for Jr. NAD officer positions, started with nominations of Jr. NAD and Student Council officers together. Prior to student debates on Friday, November 6th, we had many posts of those students who wanted to run for officers on the walls for two weeks.

WVSD Jr. NAD Leadership Retreat was filled with few presentations given by WV Association of the Deaf (WVAD), WV Commission of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (WVCDHH), and National Black Deaf Advocates (NDBA), followed by team building activities for the students led by the WVAD Board. WVAD President, John Burdette, talked about WVAD and his experiences in Jr. NAD during his youth days; WVCDHH Project Director, Rachel Raja, shared information about services that are provided by WVCDHH. After lunch, WVAD led a Parliamentary Procedures Workshop for the students. Guest speaker for the (See WVSD Rejoins... on page 5)
Happy New Year Everyone!

I hope you had a fantastic holiday with your family and friends this past Thanksgiving and Christmas!

On September 24-26, 2015, Donna M. Williams and I went to Birmingham, Alabama, to attend the NAD Leadership Training Conference (NLTC) (see story on page 6).

The WVAD Board had its first meeting on November 7, 2015, at the West Virginia Schools for the Deaf and the Blind (WVSD). We were in Romney for WVSD’s Junior NAD Leadership Retreat. WVAD was very pleased to hear that WVSD has rejoined the Jr. NAD program, combined with Student Council. See story on page 1. The location of the next biennial conference for 2017 has been selected and it will be held at Glade Springs Resort in Daniels, WV, near Beckley, WV.

I want to update everyone on projects or things that have been happening in West Virginia.

- WVAD Education Committee has been working on WV’s Deaf Child Bill of Rights (DCBR) by revising/editing the bill, to be submitted to the WV Legislature by January 1st, to have it passed into law instead of it being a resolution. Currently, our WV DCBR is a resolution.
- West Virginia Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing (WVCDHH) got a new logo make-over! The new logo looks great! Deaf Awareness Day at the Capitol, in partnership by WVCDHH and WVAD, will be held on Tuesday, March 8, 2016, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Stay tuned for more information/announcement either by WVCDHH or WVAD.

A quick reminder for those who have not paid for expired membership (see page 27 for membership form), please send the form and payment to our Membership Coordinator, Larry Hubbard. Good news! WVAD is now accepting debit and credit cards for membership fees, etc. We are currently accepting Visa, MasterCard, and Discover. If you are not a member of WVAD, please join. If you have any questions about membership, please contact Larry Hubbard, our Membership Coordinator. Your support and dues help keep WVAD going. It is a good way to give someone a membership as a gift.

In closing, please check the WVAD website (www.wvad.net) or WV Association of the Deaf page on Facebook for any information about WVAD.

On behalf of the WVAD Board, we wish you all a great year in 2016!

John W. Burdette

afternoon was Tim Albert, President of NBDA. It was a very exciting morning for everyone in the multi-purpose room.

In the evening, WVAD officers were in the gym to give WVSDB students activities related to leadership development. WVSDB Superintendent Martin Keller and his wife Donna joined with us in the activities. We also had a wonderful social.

In the election on Tuesday morning, November 10, staff and students voted; Jr. NAD President is Patrick Epperly, Vice-President is Anne Barnhart, Secretary is Jordan Simmons, Treasurer is Kaylee Edwards, Sergeant is Jacob Hundley. Two Representative of Student Council are Ashley Shuck and Miach Virts. Let us wish them much success as WVSDB officers to make the WVSDB campus life successful.

We, WVSDB staff and students, want to thank WVAD for coming and kicking off the Jr. NAD and Student Council organization. We are looking forward to a successful school year 2015-2016 with every individual’s contribution to WVSDB.
The National Leadership Training Conference (NLTC) in Birmingham, Alabama, was held on September 24-26, 2015. John Burdette and Donna M. Williams attended, representing West Virginia Association of the Deaf (WVAD). It was a very rich and educational experience. They arrived in Birmingham Wednesday night, September 23.

Since we arrived in Birmingham, Alabama, Wednesday night, the next day we walked around to check out the surrounding areas outside of the hotel. Registration and welcome reception was held on Thursday evening, September 24, 2015. The welcome reception was hosted by the NAD Board. They introduced all the board members and the workshop presenters for Friday and Saturday. There were a total of 18 workshops and 5 sessions to attend. We were able to attend at least 5 workshops plus two lunch presentations. There were approximately 200 attendees at the conference.

Friday, September 25, 2015, breakfast was on our own with registration and sponsors’ exhibits. John and Donna attended “Board Governance, Leadership, and Accountability” workshop, presented by NAD President, Chris Wagner. He said that running a non-profit organization is never easy. There are many things each organization must work on—financial difficulties, state legislative threats, political issues, membership, communication, the board dynamics, etc. Chris also said each state association should be incorporated. WVAD is incorporated. He also said bylaws should be used as a guide; however, membership dues, etc., should be in a separate Board Policy Guidebook. He also said that it is not healthy to keep revising the by-laws every 2 years. Through it all, the foundation of keeping an organization running well is board governance. This workshop focused on best practices for leadership and governance of board operations, including the agenda and structure of board meetings, assigning board tasks, etc. Also, discussed was what makes a person a good leader and how does the community hold the leaders accountable. It is important to have a good relationship with the community.

The 2nd workshop John attended on Friday afternoon was “Multigenerational Leadership” presented by Frank Turk. He stressed the importance of and need for purpose to join the adults and youth groups to create a positive community of deaf and hard of hearing generations. As the Deaf population become older, it is important to connect the older adults and the young adults. The young adults need the older adults to Believe in them, to Encourage them, to Share with them, and Trust them (BEST), etc. Working together, the two groups can make incredible things happen for their respective programs, organizations, and communities. They can develop mutual respect and trust, build relationships that last, and, as partners, maintain and enhance successful plan for all state associations of the deaf throughout Deaf America.

Plenary (presentation) and Luncheon — “Governance and Conflict: Prevention and Resolution” was presented by Heath Harker. This plenary session discussed the intersections between governance and conflict and explained how they impact both the prevention and resolution of organizational conflict. Some strategies for governance include: (1) Is the purpose clear? (2) Are the outcomes clear? (3) Is decision making clear? (4) Is communication effective? Communication is more critical in the Deaf community.

Regional and Professional Caucuses — There are 4 regions, including affiliates. WVAD is in Region 1. Each region were to discuss their concerns and make suggestions what NAD could do to help them, such as bring bills on national level that will help impact all state levels. In our region, we discussed state issues, Deaf Child Bill of Rights (DCBR), Lead-K: Early Hearing Detection Intervention (EHDI), elderly deaf in nursing homes, etc. It was encouraged that each state find out about the state EHDI board and try to get a board member on the board. WVAD is still trying to get more information about this.

Friday afternoon Donna attended “Looking through the Eyes of the Mainstream,” presented by Wendy Brehm and Nancy Holdren. Nancy is an educational interpreter and researcher. Wendy was an intern working at NAD. This workshop addressed the current issues that students in the mainstreamed schools/programs face from an “inside perspective.” There were many questions and answers among those who attended. Learned that 85 percent of children between the ages of 6 and 21 years old attend mainstream schools, partially and/or full time (Schick, Skalicky, Edwards, & Kushalnagar, 2013).

Friday evening, the Alabama Association of the Deaf (AAD) hosted a “Meet & Greet Dinner/Mixer” at the Mugshots Grill and Bar. Dinner and drinks were on our own. Mugshots donated 15 percent of their profits that (See NLTC Conference... on page 7)

Steve Lovi and Michelle Cline, Region 1 representatives, discussing priorities in the Region 1 caucus meeting.
On Saturday morning, Donna attended “NAD Educational Updates: Where are We?” presented by NAD Staff Attorney and Educational Advocate Tawny Holmes. Tawny shared what she, the NAD attorneys, and the NAD Education Strategy Team have been doing since the 2014 NAD conference and their goals for the next few years. Tawny has provided 35 presentations at various schools/programs and 26 education-related conferences. Topics included Education Advocacy, IEP Advocacy, Language Acquisition, ADA Guidelines on Effective Communication, etc. WVAD would like to have Tawny come to WV. There are now Education Advocates in 44 states, including WV. She also helps focus on legislative bills in the state. The 16 members of the Education Strategy Team are committed to ASL-English bilingual education to prevent language deprivation, legislative advocacy, and diversity in education. About 55 percent of deaf and hard of hearing children are students of color. This team has been a member of the planning committee on the Early Hearing Detection Intervention (EHDI) for 3 years. They encourage each state association to get involved with this organization by asking to be a member of the advisory board. WVAD is still trying to get more information about this group in WV. This team is also involved in promoting the Cogswell and Macy Sullivan Act on the federal level.

The second workshop Donna attended Saturday morning was “Identifying and Intervening with Deaf Children at Risk for Language Deprivation” presented by Wyatt Hall. Professionals who work with deaf and hard of hearing children and adults, such as teachers and clinicians, often observe poor language skills in both English and ASL. These individuals can be described as having information gaps, limited social skills, diminished coping skills, reduced reasoning abilities, and more likely to experience trauma and addiction. Mr. Hall quoted Dr. Sanjay Gulati, a communication specialist at Boston Children’s Hospital, “The single greatest risk faced by Deaf people is inadequate exposure to a usable first language.” Mr. Hall showed research that proves that ASL helps build English and that the longer deaf and hard of hearing children are in bilingual bimodal school/environment, the better their language scores are. What can we, as a community, do? (1) Value ASL and written English equally. (2) Keep our children in schools for the Deaf. (3) Demand higher accountability and signing skills from teachers of the deaf. (4) Understand the IEP process and how to use it to create bilingual environments for deaf and hard of hearing children. This would help decrease language deprivation among deaf and hard of hearing individuals.

Luncheon and Keynote Presentation: The presentation was “Legislative (See NLTC Conference... on page 8)
Overview and Model Bills” presented by Kim Bianco-Majeri. She shared NAD’s top priorities: interpreters, deaf schools, EHDI/early intervention, mental health. Other priorities include the Deaf Child Bill of Right (DCBR), LEAD-K, and Language Deprivation Mandate. NAD now has model bills for the DCBR and shared the LEAD-K from California and Rhode Island that can be used as a model. LEAD-K focuses on providing language to deaf and hard of hearing children birth to age 5. DCBR focuses on all deaf and hard of hearing children birth to age 21. Kim emphasized on getting involved in the community and legislature if you want anything changed. All politics begin in our local area. We must also work with the state commission. She ended her presentation with this quote by Doug Firebaugh “Every day do something that will inch you closer to a better tomorrow.”

After the luncheon and keynote presentation, we had another regional and professional caucus meeting to continue the discussions from the day before. We brainstormed ideas for priorities for the next NAD conference to be held in Phoenix, Arizona, July 5-9, 2016. The 3 priorities Region 1 decided on are LEAD-K (for deaf and hard of hearing children birth to age 5), Deaf Child Bill of Rights (DCBR—for any deaf and hard of hearing child), and Early Hearing Detection Intervention (EHDI). These were proposed at the general meeting of all the regions.

The last workshop Saturday afternoon, John attended “Does Your Organization Reflect the Community?” presented by Richard McCowan. This workshop addressed a very common issue within nonprofit organizations in the deaf and hard of hearing community. Questions that were asked included (1) Are our organizations representing or reflecting the whole deaf and hard of hearing community in our local areas? If not, can it be done? (2) How do we reach out to people who have traditionally not been involved in our organizations? (3) What have other organizations done to successfully bring in all types of people regardless of age, religion, race, nationality, education, or background to work together for our common goals and become strong unified community? These are hard questions that need to be answered.

The last workshop Donna attended was “IEP Advocacy 101” presented by NAD Staff Attorney and Education Advocate Tawny Holmes and Christine Moody, Program Coordinator of Texas Hands and Voices. The presenters compared Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) with Section 504 and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). Parents need to use the IDEA and the IEP—not Section 504 or the ADA. Parents should be encouraged to request a communication plan be attached to the IEP. The presenters explained the IEP process in detail and provided a list of rights the parents have. Some common challenges for parents and school districts include access to qualified interpreters, lack of access to speech/language specialists, access to ASL in early intervention, school districts saying no to send child to the school for the deaf, lack of experienced teachers, and different expectations for child by school and parents. Eighty percent due process (complaint) are lost because parents did not keep documentations. The presenters also discussed the amendment to the IDEA law that was proposed September 2015—the Cogswell & Macy Sullivan Act that would require data tracking for every state, provide family training/support through K-12 and not only in early intervention, access to ASL and English, and qualified professionals fluent in language. Many references and resources were provided.

Saturday evening NAD showed the movie “No Ordinary Hero” and popcorn was provided.

Overall, the NLTC was a wonderful, rich learning experience for all. The next NLTC conference will be in 2017 in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. For more information about NAD and their events, please see https://nad.org.

4th Annual WVAD Christmas Party by Tamera Deem

WVAD held its fourth annual Christmas party at the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) in Clarksburg, WV, on December 12, 2015. The party was a success and everyone enjoyed their time there.

Eighty-one (81) people came from far and near. The weather was great and seasonably warm which was a blessing so that everyone could get home safe, without worrying about the snow.

The main dishes were provided by WVAD, which consisted of turkey, ham, mashed potatoes, gravy, stuffing, green beans, yams, rolls, etc., plus covered dishes and desserts that people brought to complete our meal.

Veronda Harrison, being the chef, and several volunteers were a big help in the kitchen and they cooked a wonderful meal for us. Thanks to them! We also appreciate the efforts of others who pitched in, in the kitchen and helped with the clean up after the party.

There were prizes that included $1,000 in cash giveaways and Christmas wreath (donated by Tina Stump) from admission, $300 cash giveaways from the cash prize, a 43-inch TV, 2 iPad minis, and digital photo frame.

Everyone enjoyed meeting old friends and new friends, catching up on news and reminiscing old memories that brought out laughter. I am sure that everyone had a wonderful time!

We want to thank Robert Stewart for making reservations at the VFW for us earlier in the year. We also want to thank everyone who helped with the little chores before, during, and after the party to make it a success! It was very much appreciated!

Thanks to everyone who came to make our annual Christmas party a success! We look forward to our next Christmas party! 🎄

James “Scott” Johnson

James Scott Johnson, 47, of Huntington, WV, entered Heaven’s gates Thursday, October 1, 2015, after a brief illness. Scott was born deaf, but did not let that stop him. He graduated in 1988, from the WV School for the Deaf and Blind, in Romney, WV, and always faced the many challenges in his life, with a smile on his face. He attended Grace Gospel Church in the early years of his life. He never met a stranger, and new friends learned very quickly of his love for Marshall University’s “Thundering Herd” of which he was an avid fan for many years.

Surviving Scott are his parents, Rose and Marvin Gray, and Jim and Theresa Johnson, all of Huntington; a sister and brother-in-law, Kimberly and Mike Webb; brother and sister-in-law, Brian and Brenda Johnson; three step-brothers and sisters-in-laws, Sean and Ann Gray, Neil and Chanda Gray, and Nathan and Cassie Hefner; two step-sisters, Shauna and Tony Curtis and Robyn Gray; and a host of nieces and nephews.

The family would like to thank Scott’s friends, and the staff at Pleasant Valley Nursing and Rehab, for the love and care that was shown to him during the time that he lived there. Also to the doctors and nurses at Pleasant Valley Hospital, and the ICU at Cabell Huntington Hospital, “You are truly angels here on earth. We cannot thank you enough, for the exceptional care that Scott received. May you continue to bless others as you have us.”

Friends called from 11:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m., service time on Saturday, October 3, 2015, at Chapman’s Mortuary, with Pastor Phil Wilson officiating. Burial was at White Chapel Memorial Gardens, Barboursville.

Food Lion Employee Wins State Ability Works Award

Betty Berry, a quality assurance associate for Food Lion, Beckley, is the West Virginia Division of Rehabilitation Services 2015 State Ability Works award winner from the Beckley District. The award, given each October during National Disability Employment Awareness Month, recognizes exemplary vocational rehabilitation success.

The Beckley District serves Braxton, Fayette, Greenbrier, Mercer, Monroe, Nicholas, Pocahontas, Raleigh, Summers, and Webster counties.

Finding a job wasn’t easy for Berry, but now she works as a quality assurance associate, a job that she loves and hopes to keep for a long time.

Berry has been deaf her entire life and has low vision that has progressively gotten worse over time, which puts her in the category as someone who has deaf-blindness.

Berry uses American Sign Language to communicate. She attended the West Virginia Schools for the Deaf and the Blind, graduating in 1996.

Because she wanted to find work and it was not going to be easy to accomplish, Berry approached the West Virginia Division of Rehabilitation Services to help her. Her first attempt was unsuccessful. But, according to Alyce Almond, Berry’s vocational rehabilitation counselor, after reapplying for services with DRS, her job search took about two years, but Berry didn’t give up.

“Globally, people probably think her deafness is her biggest barrier because she requires an interpreter for some things like meetings,” explained Almond. “But, Berry I believe, did not see her deafness as her biggest barrier, it was her vision loss.”

According to Berry, she uses sign language or writes notes to communicate. But when it comes to her vision, “I have to have about 4 feet to talk to people ... I can’t see past that.”

Working with DRS, Berry received many services, including vocational counseling and guidance throughout the process, as well as assessments to help identify her interests and abilities.

During this time, Almond teamed up with Ken Harer, an employment specialist with Mountain State Centers for Independent Living, which provides community rehabilitation program services to some DRS clients.

Harer worked directly with Berry, helping her with her job search and identifying potential employment opportunities for her. Harer helped Berry with her résumé and with her job interviewing skills. And, he began approaching local businesses about potential job opportunities for Berry.

“Harer probably went to 20 different employers and advocated for Berry,” said Almond.

All the hard work paid off when he met Don Smith, Food Lion’s store manager. After Harer and Smith met, things started coming together for Berry.

Smith interviewed Berry and things progressed from there. “I had an interpreter with me at the interview and Don did say, ‘I have a feeling that I think I’m going to hire you,’” explained Berry. “And I said, ‘Wow!’ The reason why, I told the interpreter, is that sometimes people are close-minded.”

That wasn’t the case with Smith. He worked very closely with Almond and Harer to determine what accommodations Berry would need in the workplace.

(See In the News on page 18)
One thing Berry insisted on was having a name badge that indicated to customers she was deaf. She did not want people to assume she was rude when she didn’t respond because she couldn’t hear what they were saying to her.

An expert from the Helen Keller National Center, which specializes in working with individuals who are deaf-blind, visited Berry’s worksite, providing recommendations on things like assistive technology devices, enlarging the print on work materials, and lighting in the store that would help her do her job.

Berry worked with a job coach to help her learn her responsibilities. According to Smith, one of his employees who worked with Berry to train her, picked up on signing and learned to communicate very well with Berry. Later, she decided to leave the company and Berry took over her role at the store.

Berry’s quality assurance responsibilities include making sure the store and its perimeter are clean and neat looking. This involves everything from cleaning the windows to the parking lot and the employee break room. Her job is a lot of work, but she does not complain.

While Smith believes he has a store full of good associates, he refers to Berry as his “go-to lady for quality assurance.”

Harer believes Berry’s willingness to face her challenges head-on speaks volumes to those who work with and interact with her at the store. He hopes that her strong determination and work ethic serve as an inspiration to her community.

Berry is grateful for the assistance she received from Almond and Harer. “They tried to encourage me and to change my life for a better future,” said Berry.

It’s not about our disabilities, it’s our abilities that count!
The Daily Moth received several drawings of moths from Dr. Martin Keller, Deaf Superintendent at West Virginia School for the Deaf. Awesome job, students at WV School for the Deaf! Thanks for sending them in, Dr. Keller!
In his two short months of serving as superintendent of the West Virginia Schools for the Deaf and the Blind, Martin Keller Jr., along with his Chief Operating Officer Patrick McCord and Chief Financial Officer Mark Gandolfi, has been creating a CEFP, or Comprehensive Education Facilities Plan, including rigorous curriculum for the future of the schools.

One of his many plans is to bring a robotics program to the schools.

“I recently visited the Western Pennsylvania School for the Deaf, because I had heard they had a wonderful robot program,” Keller said. Keller, who is deaf, said he was familiar with such a program since he helped start one at the New York School for the Deaf.

“I want to implement it here,” Keller said. “We worked on the kind of equipment and technology we’d need, saw the program, and interviewed students.”

Keller’s interview for this article was conducted via video interview.

“This was my first video interview,” he said.

Keller said technology is helping both the deaf and the blind leap over barriers. He has a close friend who is deaf and works for NASA. NASA’s Robotic Alliance Project consists of members from across government and education dedicated to the promotion of robotics through competitions. The alliance mission is to create a human, technical, and programmatic resource of robotics capabilities to enable the implementation of future robotic space exploration mission.

Keller has plans for the deaf students to participate in the competition.

“I know some people think there are barriers the deaf and blind can’t do,” he said. “I look forward to overcoming the myths about our abilities.”

“Hopefully one day there will be a universal design concept where there will be no barriers for any disabled group.”

He said he hopes to have the robotics program in place by the beginning of the 2016 school year. Keller said the big barrier for the deaf is communication, but through technology, that is rapidly changing.

“English is challenging. For the deaf, their first language is ASL, American Sign Language,” Keller said. “Often people have a misconception of the deaf. They are amazed when they read my writing.

“When you can’t speak, many deaf people type well and speech read. Learning how to speak will not teach them to write.”

Keller said the school has a Reading Counts program, where the students work only with other students to earn points for reading.

“We just joined the national competition, Battle of the Books. The middle school students have to read three books, know all the details and compete with other students through video,” he said.

Keller said the school works with blind teachers Donna Brown and Anita Atkins, who is an alumna of the school, and he wants to see the students become leaders.

“Anita is involved with the local community,” he said. “We have 35 students involved in the Jr. NAD — that helps build leadership skills.”

The deaf and the blind have unique senses, says Keller.

“Deaf people may not have all five senses,” he said. “Our eyes are more attuned — our peripheral vision is greater. The blind have a sense of touch that is more keen than those with sight.”

Keller hopes to get a new, ADA-compliant dorm constructed on campus and financing will be sought from the School Building Authority.

“We want to be compatible with deaf and blind needs,” he said. “We plan to visit the Legislature in the spring; we’ll also have some of our students be (legislative) pages for a day.

“It will be a very good experience. A deaf student can do anything, given the chance.”

Keller said the school’s academic curriculum is rigorous and both STEM and STEAM are stressed at the schools.

“We want them to be prepared for college and for whatever direction they want to take,” he said.

The Family School Association, which functions like a PTA, recently was formed at the schools. Participants include parents, staff and the community.

“We know it requires a village to raise a deaf or blind child,” Keller said. “Parents have to be fully invested.”

He said it’s important that parents understand the schools’ programs and services in order for their children to
The West Virginia Schools for the Deaf and the Blind have 126 students enrolled and 650 students in the outreach program.

As part of the outreach program, eight staffers work closely with families of the blind and others work with the deaf families in services such as training, language, and communication.

Keller’s ideas seem limitless — he’s also looking at post-graduate programs, Career Tech Education programs and more classes with more skills, such as cooking, mechanics, welding and cosmetology.

expand our team and bring in more underclassmen.”

Coaching the team brings a lot of joy to Keller. As for the most rewarding part?
“Seeing the team members grow as individuals and as a team,” she said.
“We practiced and worked hard as a team before the regionals and it made me proud to see the team members using the knowledge and skills they developed.

“The best part was before and after the matches, the students were fired up and would research topics on their iPhones, then quiz each other. I have seen leaders emerge in this group and have seen shy students blossom.”

The future is bright for the team. If the formal class can be organized, it will benefit them on many levels.

“This would be very beneficial to the students because they would have the opportunity to develop a variety of skills,” Keller said. Those skills include research, speed reading, presentation, and academic knowledge.

The midwest regional competition for the 2016-2017 school year will be at Indiana School for the Deaf in Indianapolis in February 2017.

“I plan to set up practice matches in the upcoming months against other schools for the deaf via videophone. There is a network of teams that play against each other throughout the year,” Keller said.
